2a. Lead low from either hand and finesse the nine or ten if the second player plays low. This guarantees four tricks against any distribution. Starting with a top honor may lose to a 4-0 split.

2b. If you think East will be short, play the king. If he plays an honor, finesse the ten on the next lead. Vice versa if you think West is short: Start with the Ace.

3. Play the king or queen, guarding against any 4-0 split. If there is one, you can finesse for the jack either way.

4. Play the ace, guarding against the chance that West has all four missing cards. In that case, you will be able to finesse. If East has all four, you have no chance.

5a. Play the Ace-King-Queen and hope the outstanding cards are split 3/2 so you can pick up the other two tricks.

5b. Play low from both hands first, giving up a trick; then play the honors. If the outstanding cards are split 5-0, bad luck!

Answers to Card Combination Quiz:

1a. Play the jack. East is almost certain to have the ace since it is abnormal and risky to underlead an ace against a suit contract. You must hope that West has the Jack.

1b. Play anything. You must just guess as the ace could logically be in either hand. There may be a slight clue: If either of opponents has bid, assume he has the ace.
